Preface

This collection was transferred to the Medical Archives by the Secretary/ Treasurer of the Society of The New York Hospital, H. Mefford Runyon. These are the extant files of that office up to 1933 when Augustine J. Smith took over the position.

Historical Background

The duties of the Office of the Secretary/Treasurer of the Society of The New York Hospital have undergone dramatic changes over the years. The chronology below, taken from a survey of the By-laws of the Society of The New York Hospital, outlines these transformations and, in doing so, also bears witness to the changes in the Society and in the country as a whole.

In 1804 the Treasurer is charged with keeping the accounts. In 1811 he is specifically told to open a bank account and keep a checkbook - an innovation due to the birth of banks in the early years of the Nineteenth Century. Later, the Treasurer's office turns to more supervisory duties, with paid clerks and trust companies to handle much of the work. This reflects the growing complexity of the Society's finances, as well as the rise of modern financial institutions and techniques.

The Secretary's office also evolved over the years. Early tasks were centered around taking and reporting minutes and announcing meetings. Starting in 1884, the Secretary was required to keep hours at the Hospital and to assist the Treasurer whenever necessary. Two years later the Secretary was given charge of the Patient accounts - a duty held until 1936 when the By-laws no longer list this under the Office's responsibilities.

1936 marks a year of many changes in the duties of both of these offices. Among other things, it was the first year that the Secretary was made "responsible for the custody of all papers and documents belonging to the Society for which [the] Treasurer is not responsible." Luckily, prior to this, Henry Crane, Secretary from 1885-1922, had been very conscious of the need to retain these records, and later Secretaries maintained a large body of material under their care.

Other major alterations in the Secretary/Treasurer's roles were made in 1948. From this year until 1977, the Secretary and Treasurer's offices were united, and the combined duties given into the hands of one man. Modifications in the stated duties of the two positions in 1974 reflect a substantial shift in responsibilities, presaging the revisions, and separation of offices, contained in the 1977 By-Laws.

Scope and Content Note

These records document the changes that took place during the Nineteenth and early Twentieth centuries at New York Hospital and in the Office of the Secretary/Treasurer in particular. They also form a case study of the fundamental changes that were taking place in hospitals around the country at this time. The early papers, especially when used in conjunction with the minutes of the various committees of the Board of Governors, show a prominent and active lay leadership guiding the course of the Hospital in all matters, medical and non-medical. As the science of medicine advanced throughout the century, the records show how the role of the Medical Board increased in importance, with doctors assuming a greater power in the medical management of the Hospital. The records reflect how hospital administration was becoming more professional at this time. The day to day operations devolved more and more into the hands of a trained superintendent, while the Governors were left to grapple with the increasingly complex legal and financial aspects of running a hospital.

There are other Nineteenth Century trends that can be traced in these papers that continue to have immediacy today. There can be seen the rise and early efforts towards the professionalization of nursing, and the evolution of ideas and ethics regarding fees for service for doctors in a hospital setting. The problem of providing care for all in need, regardless of their ability to pay, and balancing this with the doctors' and hospital's need for funds, is continual. In addition, the ethics of fee-splitting, referring clinic patients to private practices, and the increasing need to support a larger staff of doctors in hospital service are all aspects of the fees problem. The concepts of devoting more, or full time as a hospital-based clinician, plus the need and value of performing research and teaching in the hospital are all themes that grow in these papers and which are finally embodied in the Agreement made with Cornell University in 1927 to set up this Medical Center.

The bulk of the records in this series date from the 1840's to about 1920. After this time, the papers are primarily routine items, with the exception of a few relating to the affiliation with Cornell and the gift of money received from George F. Baker, Sr. and Jr.. More material regarding this and subsequent Hospital affiliations and activities are contained in the Secretary/Treasurer "BTF" series, dating from 1911-1960. (The Medical Archives has a detailed register for this collection.)

The files are arranged strictly chronologically, thus, in some cases, items relating to the same topic will be in folders from different years. Contributing to this separation of materials is the fact that these files are very much provenance oriented. Records are gathered according to which groups dealt with them: the Executive Committee, the Medical Board, the Finance Committee (Fiscal), the Committee on Law (Legal), or the Real Estate Committee, for example. An extensive folder description has been prepared and this will help to trace subjects over different folders

There are two major gaps in this collection that should be noted. There is little here relating to the operation of the Bloomingdale Asylum, especially after it moved to White Plains in 1894. Also, while these are the papers of the Office of the Secretary/Treasurer, there are few detailed financial documents here. There is a separate series of Treasurer's papers which • contains reports, correspondence, indentures, bonds, etc.. This should be referred to by anyone seeking specific information regarding these transactions. A group of leases and deeds have also been removed to their own series.
